A little lady cat with ambitions to become a feline Pavolowa decides to steal a fig leaf and "do her stuff" commonly associated with Eve. She does all the latest dance stuff, even King Tut's favorite Egyptian.

Kitty soon tires of dancing and decides to take a swim. About this time Adam Cat, toggged out in his leopard skin, takes a brisk walk with his faithful Caddy, Noah Mouse. They stop on the links to play a little golf, Adam has a bit of trouble in chosing between a spiked club or a soaking mop as the proper club, but finally chooses his trusty spiked mauler. Noah Mouse is obliged to dig up the proper shapped rocks and hold them on his head while Adam takes a swing. If luck or chance means anything at any time, then the layout of this course and the travel of the ball was all "doped out," for No. 1 strikes a tree and shakes out a storm of sleeping cats. No. 2 outs some birds and No. 3 scares the tree bird away.

Adam decides that golf is "all wet" and decides to go for a swim. At the lake he discovers the fig leaf and indicates that its owner would be his proper mate. He hides behind a rock and when Kitty has dressed he uses "Spiked Mauler No. 2" and produces sleeping sickness immediately. There is nothing left to do but drag her home, close the door, and set out the milk bottles.

Our next episode concerns primitive humans. Caveman Cy is driving his faithful stead Danny Dinousaur at a rapid pace. At the well Danny rudely upsets his driver, but cries when reprimanded.

Cy soon notices the playful little wild girl of the countryside that rides wild lions and all that sort of thing. Cy speeds up Danny and a speedy chase ends by the use of "Spiked Mauler No. 2." Little wild girl, safe in slumber, is dragged home to the cave and Cy sets out the milk bottles.

Ages seem to pass, at least a season or two. Blossoms have come and gone. Then notice Mr. and Mrs. Adam Cat going for a walk with the family, a fair-sized army in itself. Then cave man Cy and the "Mrs." strut along only followed by a Pekinese dog. All of this indicates the truth of the statement. "It Costs More Every Year to Rai a Family."
